

ENGINEERING SYSTEMS ANALYSIS

Announcements

ENGN 2226
Semester 1, 2007

- Lab/Tute enrollments.
  - Be careful if you are enrolled in more than one laboratory session. (ie both a Wednesday and a Friday, etc). I will unenroll you from the more fully booked session.
  - Apart from this, keep trying to sort out your labs and tutes through the electronic enrollment until next Tuesday. As of then I will clear up any outstanding cases.
  - For some reason, some students dont get the lab-tutorial icon. For those students simply go directly to <http://webct.anu.edu.au/webct/homearea/actreg.pl>

- Problem sheet is posted on web
  - Due Thursday 20 March, 12:00pm
- Tutorial sheet is posted on Web.
  - Monday tutorial will be held 17 March.
  - All other tutorials run this week.
- Laboratory sheet is posted on web
  - Monday AM and PM labs will run 17 March
  - All other laboratories run this week.

- Laboratories.
  - Each Laboratory runs for two weeks.
- There are two parts to a laboratory
  - There will be a coding component that will be done individually during the laboratory session. In this time you can ask your demonstrator for help and will get your project marked off.
  - There is a small project for each laboratory that will be done in your laboratory groups in your own time. This will be written up as a lab report and handed in for group marks.

- Grading for Laboratories
  - Each student will separately attend their laboratory sessions. During this session you will write code according to the laboratory sheet and get it marked off by the demonstrator. This part of your laboratory assessment will be worth 5% of the course grade.
  - Laboratory reports are due around 2 weeks after the lab is first published. They will be approximately 5 page documents. They will total 25% of the course grade.

30% - 5 Laboratories

Each Lab has two weeks assigned and requires a short lab report to be handed in.

- 5% will be for in class laboratory coding.
- 25% will be for the group laboratory reports.

15% - 5 Problem sheets

15% - Mid Semester Quiz

(Hopefully Friday 11th April)

40% - Final Exam

(Sometime in exam period)